THIS AND THAT

Comments on Anything and
Everything for the Week
By Norman W. Ralston

Going Ahead

It is interesting to note in news of the week that another Circleville business man has had enough faith in his city to announce that he will build an $80,000 theatre in Circleville and will start construction work June 10. That means Circleville is going ahead, if the boulevard light proposition is ever gotten through and if the Frank Berger hospital gift is accepted. Harry Clifton, already head of two businesses in the city, the Clifton Auto Sales company, and the Maytag agency, now is well on his way to a third great adventure. He has been successful because he has been willing to invest his money in his home town and in business enterprise. That's what makes any city go ahead. There are plenty of other Circleville men, some in business now and some who aren't, who could help make this a better city to live in, a better business city for everyone, if they, too, would only launch some project intended for the economic and civic good of Circleville.

Mine Disasters

Three major mine disasters shook various parts of the United States with grim tragedy this week. In Mather, Pa., 210 men were trapped in an explosion in the Mather Collieries and 190 met their death. At Yukon, W. Va., 17 were killed similarly and at Harlan, Ky., 15 died. It seems strange, but when one mine tragedy occurs there are usually others to follow. Many of these could be prevented if operators provided the right kind of working conditions for these men who go into the very bowels of the earth in their quest for the natural resources of America. It is bad enough to be away from God's sunlight, let alone knowing that at the same time you are flirting with grim death. A rigid federal inspection of mines, one that really works and exacts strict penalties when rules are disobeyed, might lessen the human hazard that now seems to prevail in many collieries.

Police and Firemen

In Memorial hall this Thursday, May 31, will be presented a benefit concert for Circleville's police and fire departments. The proceeds will go for a uniform fund to see that these worthy servants of the public are equipped with the proper kind of clothing. And it should be that way. Men who go about their jobs, dressed slovenly, soon become careless with the work they are doing, and the employer suffers. In this case, the employer happens to be everyone in Circleville, or in short and officially, the City of Circleville. This city ought to take pride, if it already doesn't, in its police and fire departments. It ought to know that these men are constantly working for them, day and night, and are deserving of a little attention and care. They risk their lives 24 hours of the day and only get a small salary for doing it. They are at least entitled to clothes that make them look nice and help them to take a reasonable amount of pride in their positions. If you don't attend the concert in Memorial hall Thursday you at least ought to buy a ticket.

The Farm Bill

Again we mention the McNary-Haugen farm bill, which came into the limelight again this week when President Coolidge vetoed it for the second time. There is no chance of passing the measure at this session of Congress now. The bill which was designed to smooth out agricultural conditions for some reason or other failed to meet with the approval of the nation's chief executive who isn't going to run for President anymore. The farmers, at least, are entitled to know why this important bill was killed. Congress seemingly tried its best to enact the measure. Now what can be the matter with it?

Heroes

The editors of the New York Law Review have decided the country ought to pay a little more attention to Lindbergh. And so they are urging the adoption of their resolution that May 21 be set aside either as "Lindbergh Day" or "Aviation Day." We imagine Lindy is just mildly interested. FARM MEASURE ENTERS FIGHT IN POLITICS

To Figure In Presidential Drive Now Due To Senate's Upholding Coolidge's Veto

WASHINGTON, May 26.—The McNary-Haugen bill was thrown into the presidential campaign today by action of the senate upholding President Coolidge's veto. The measure failed 50 to 31 to get the two-thirds majority necessary for adoption without the president's signature.

The vote was forced by the farm bloc to make a record upon which it will go into the Kansas City convention seeking a McNary-Haugen bill plank in the platform.

The party is almost equally divided upon the issue as far as its senatorial representation is concerned. Twenty Republicans stood by the president and 19 stood for the bill. Of the eight Republican absentees four were paired with the president and four against.

Of the Republican presidential candidates voting, two were with the president and two with the farm bloc. Senator Curtis, Republican floor leader who voted for the bill originally, turned and voted against it because, he said, "I felt it my duty to stand by the president." He and Senator Borah of Idaho were the two candidates who voted with Mr. Coolidge.

Senator Goff of West Virginia, a third candidate, was absent but was paired with the president. The two candidates who remained against the president despite the veto were Senators Watson of Indiana and Norris of Nebraska.

The voting was conducted under the supervision of Vice-President Dawes who helped frame the bill and who is as ardent a supporter for it as his position will permit.

While the senatorial alignment shows an equal division on the issue, the president's friends are expected to be in the saddle at the convention. An analysis of the vote shows no Republican from a state east of Indiana voted for the bill. The Eastern states will have a dominating influence at the convention with the help of the administration delegates from the South.

But even with a majority in the convention, many administration friends are worried about the possible effect of a bitter convention fight over the issue. They are particularly apprehensive because the two leading candidates of the party, Secretary of Commerce Hoover and former Gov. Lowden of Illinois represent the party's division on the issue. Hoover is credited with representing the president's views. Indeed some quarters accept the unverified stories that he helped Mr. Coolidge write the veto message. Lowden, on the other hand, is a champion of the bill and is supported by the farm bloc.

Many of the bloc leaders make no secret of their bitterness against the president. They expected him to veto the measure but they did not expect his vehement denunciation and ridicule of their economic theories.

The close vote, the equal division of senatorial Republicans, the desire of many farm bloc members to beat Hoover at all costs, the resentment of the Lowden-Dawes-Watson group at the tone of the president's message, all indicate that a merry convention fight is in prospect at Kansas City June 12.

PICKAWAY-CO TO PARTICIPATE IN WELFARE MEETING

Noah G. Spangler Is Named Chairman In Drive To Promote Conference

Pickaway-co is one of five counties which will participate in the Welfare Conference to be held under the direction of the Division of Charities, Department of Public Welfare. The conference will be held in Logan, on Wednesday, June 13.

Other participating counties are Hocking, Perry, Fairfield and Athens.

Noah G. Spangler, of Circleville, is the appointed Chairman for Pickaway-co, and will make plans for the conference.

Mr. Spangler will be glad to receive the names of persons who expect to attend the session starting at 9 a. m. and lasting until 4:30 p. m. in order that he may register names of those who may attend the noon day luncheon.

"The Prevention of Juvenile Delinquency and Delinquency" will be the subject of discussion. The increasing number of children in Ohio who are removed from their own homes to dependent and delinquent institutions has aroused the interest of people all over the state to the grievousness of the juvenile problem.

"We look for the symptoms of juvenile delinquency in the common schools and start prevention work rather than wait until a juvenile case becomes so hardened that it reaches the courts," is the belief of Miss Bell Greve, superintendent of the Division of Charities, Department of Public Welfare. Miss Greve is one of the speakers of the conference.

Juvenile judges, auditors, commissioners and generally well known people from various parts of the state will have part in the program. There will be round table discussion of local problems which will be of general interest.

It is expected that several hundred people from the five counties will be in attendance as the conference is open to all persons who are interested in child welfare and the social problems of their community.

PEKING SAVED FROM LOOTING, CHANG STATES

Southern Army Reported Decisively Defeated By Northern Troops

PEKING, China, May 26.—Marshal Chang Tso Lin today announced the nationalist threat against Peking had ended after the southern army had been decisively defeated by his northern troops below Paoting-Fu.

Chang claimed sweeping victories on the Paoting-Fu sector of the semi-circular battle front surrounding the northern capital and said these victories had definitely checked the southern army.

Chang's announcement ended unconfirmed rumors in the capital that the northern forces were retreating along the entire front, except for the Nankou Pass area. There had been unconfirmed reports that the southerners had made smashing victories and that in only one or two remote regions was Chang thoroughly entrenched.

All advices here, however, indicated there had been an engagement of major proportions although details were lacking.

The southern army advanced in two sections—one headed by Chiang Kai Shek and the other by Feng Yu Hsiang—and circled the capital at a distance of between 125 and 175 miles.

Chang set his men to a semi-circular front to protect all approaches to the capital, the ultimate goal of the nationalists.

It was the first major clash between the two forces.

If Chang's announcement today is correct, it was conceded that the strength of the northern force was far greater than many observers had believed it.

Many thought it likely that Chang would not test his strength against the invading nationalist forces. They thought it more likely he would quietly withdraw from Peking and return to his own province of Manchuria, thus permitting the nationalists to take over the capital.

Chang has said from the start, however, that he was prepared to meet the nationalists "militarily" although he has made two separate peace proposals.

MYSTERY IN DEATH OF STAR GRIDDER

COLUMBUS, O., May 26.—Police today were at a loss as to whether John A. Weldon, former star halfback and at one time captain of the Lafayette college football team, whose body was found in a ravine near here Thursday, was murdered or committed suicide.

When found, Weldon had a bullet hole in his head and his body was neatly covered with newspapers. An automobile pistol and one discharged cartridge lay beside him.

The first belief of relatives was that Weldon killed himself because he was out of work, but police were inclined to doubt the theory inasmuch as the man's pockets were empty and gave the appearance of being stolen.

Weldon formerly lived in Wintertown, N. J.

George Shaw Says He's Satisfied But "Thank, You, Doctor"

LONDON, May 26.—Dr. George Voronoff, noted gland specialist, has offered to perform a rejuvenation operation upon George Bernard Shaw but the latter has declined.

The two met at a dinner last night and Voronoff spoke enthusiastically of gland operations. It was then he told Shaw that he would perform a rejuvenation operation at any time the noted writer "felt the first symptoms of old age."

Shaw thanked the doctor but added: "Think of the horror that would arise from the whole world at the 'encore du Shaw'."

EDITOR SEEKING DAMAGES AFTER COURT'S ACTION

LANCASTER, O., May 26.—A suit for $10,000 damages, plus $25 for costs, was filed in common pleas court here today by William T. Lewis, editor of the Lancaster Gazette, against Edward W. Boerscher, Lancaster justice of the peace.

Lewis asked damages for alleged unlawful imprisonment in the county jail on a "pretended charge of contempt of court" following his arrest Thursday on a warrant issued by Boerscher as an outcome of an editorial written by Lewis in which the magistrate was criticized for imposing a small fine in an assault and battery case.

Lewis spent two hours in the Fairfield jail and secured his release through a habeas corpus writ allowed by Common Pleas Judge Brooks E. Shell, who ruled Boerscher had no jurisdiction in the contempt case.

Also at about the same time, East's Restaurant was broken into and 19 cartons of cigarettes, 6 boxes of cigars, and $5.00 in money were stolen.

Everything was done to find clues for the possible capture of the burglars, but nothing had been accomplished Saturday afternoon.

SECOND COLLINS

HARLAN, Ky., May 26.—The tragic death of Floyd Collins may find a sequel in the experience of another Kentuckian.

Fred Remmick, 45, was believed alive and entombed today in the inner workings of the Black Mountain corporation's coal mine, where an explosion killed seven miners Tuesday night. DIRIGIBLE IS LONG OVERDUE ON ITS TRIP

Improved Weather In Arctic Sea Brings Hope Ship May Come Through

(BULLETIN)

OSLO, Norway, May 26.—Roald Amundsen, veteran Arctic explorer and partner of General Umberto Nobile on their 1926 North Pole flight was asked by the Norwegian government today to go to the relief of the storm stricken dirigible Italia.

Amundsen, the only man in the world who has crossed both poles at the extremities of the world, was expected to organize an expedition at once.

It was Amundsen who on December 14, 1911, discovered the South Pole, 137 years after Capt. James Cook had led the first Antarctic exploration expedition.

On May 12, 1926, Amundsen, Nobile and Lincoln Ellsworth, American, flew across the North Pole in the dirigible Norge.

KINGS BAY, Spitzbergen, May 26.—Improved weather in southern regions of the Arctic sea today brought hope that the Polar dirigible Italia might fight its way out of the stormy northern skies, although no direct word had been heard from the craft here for almost 24 hours.

At 11 A.M. today—7 A.M. Eastern daylight time—the dirigible had been in the air about 78 1-2 hours and was almost 30 hours overdue at its hangar base.

The dirigible had 7,200 kilograms of fuel aboard when it left Kings Bay Wednesday morning. Probably this supply has been exhausted but the big semi-rigid craft still will be able to remain in the air—drifting at the mercy of the dangerous northern winds—for at least a week.

It was assumed here that if the Italia is drifting northwest winds will drive the airship towards Siberia.

That assumption, however, is based on the belief that General Umberto Nobile still is fighting the elements. There is the possibility that the Italian explorer—one of the few men to cruise over the North Pole—has seen he can make no headway and has landed his ice-covered craft some place in the Arctic solitudes.

Should the dirigible be brought to a landing on the northeast extremity of Spitzbergen, there is a chance that trappers might save its crew.

BISHOP ELECTED

KANSAS CITY, Mo., May 26.—Emerging from a long deadlock, the general conference of the Methodist Episcopal church elected the Rev. E. Stanley Jones of Sitapur, India, as its third new bishop last night.

Jones, a "dark horse" candidate, was elected on the twentieth ballot. He received 560 votes, 41 more than the necessary two-thirds majority.

MYSTERY IN DEATH OF STAR GRIDDER

COLUMBUS, O., May 26.—Police today were at a loss as to whether John A. Weldon, former star halfback and at one time captain of the Lafayette college football team, whose body was found in a ravine near here Thursday, was murdered or committed suicide.

When found, Weldon had a bullet hole in his head and his body was neatly covered with newspapers. An automatic pistol and one discharged cartridge lay beside him.

The first belief of relatives was that Weldon killed himself because he was out of work, but police were inclined to doubt the theory inasmuch as the man's pockets were empty and gave the appearance of being rifled.

Weldon formerly lived in Wadsworth, N. J.

George Shaw Says He's Satisfied But "Thank, You, Doctor"

LONDON, May 26.—Dr. George Voronoff, noted gland specialist, has offered to perform a rejuvenation operation upon George Bernard Shaw but the latter has declined.

The two met at a dinner last night and Voronoff spoke enthusiastically of gland operations. It was then he told Shaw that he would perform a rejuvenation operation at any time the noted writer "felt the first symptoms of old age."

Shaw thanked the doctor but added: "Think of the horror that would arise from the whole world at the 'encore du Shaw.'"

EDITOR SEEKING DAMAGES AFTER COURT'S ACTION

LANCASTER, O., May 26.—A suit for $1,000 damages, plus $25 for costs, was filed in common pleas court here today by William T. Lewis, editor of the Lancaster Gazette, against Edward W. Boerstler, Lancaster justice of the peace.

Lewis asked damages for alleged unlawful imprisonment in the county jail on a "pretended charge of contempt of court" following his arrest Thursday on a warrant issued by Boerstler as an outcome of an editorial written by Lewis in which the magistrate was criticized for imposing a small fine in an assault and battery case.

Lewis spent two hours in the Fairfield-co. jail and secured his release through a habeas corpus writ allowed by Common Pleas Judge Brooks E. Shell, who ruled Boerstler had no jurisdiction in the contempt case.

ASHVILLE IS PAID VISIT BY THIEVES

Al Baker, grocer, of Ashville, was the victim of burglars early Friday morning. His grocery truck in the garage, was loaded with goods to be delivered through the country on Friday. The burglars, evidently knowing this, broke into the garage and stole sugar, 12 pounds of coffee and canned goods.

Also at about the same time, Best's Restaurant was broken into and 19 cartons of cigarettes, 6 boxes of cigars, and $6.00 in money were stolen.

Everything was done to find clues for the possible capture of the burglars, but nothing had been accomplished Saturday afternoon.

SECOND COLLINS

HARLAN, Ky., May 26.—The tragic death of Floyd Collins may find a sequel in the experience of another Kentuckian.

Fred Romines, 45, was believed alive and entombed today in the inner workings of the Black Mountain corporation's coal mine, where an explosion killed seven miners Tuesday night. Fellow workers who escaped saw him running from the scene of the explosion, but a preliminary search of the mine failed to reveal him.

DIRIGIBLE IS LONG OVERDUE ON ITS TRIP

Improved Weather In Arctic Sea Brings Hope Ship May Come Through

(BULLETIN)

OSLO, Norway, May 26.—Roald Amundsen, veteran Arctic explorer and partner of General Umberto Nobile on their 1926 North Pole flight was asked by the Norwegian government today to go to the relief of the storm stricken dirigible Italia.

Amundsen, the only man in the world who has crossed both poles at the extremities of the world, was expected to organize an expedition at once.

It was Amundsen who on December 14, 1911, discovered the South Pole, 137 years after Capt. James Cook had led the first Antarctic exploration expedition.

On May 12, 1926, Amundsen, Nobile and Lincoln Ellsworth, American, flew across the North Pole in the dirigible Norge.

KINGS BAY, Spitzbergen, May 26.—Improved weather in southern regions of the Arctic sea today brought hope that the Polar dirigible Italia might fight its way out of the stormy northern skies, although no direct word had been heard from the craft here for almost 24 hours.

At 11 A. M. today—7 A. M. Eastern daylight time—the dirigible had been in the air about 78 1-2 hours and was almost 39 hours overdue at its hangar here.

The dirigible had 7,200 kilograms of fuel aboard when it left Kings Bay Wednesday morning. Probably this supply has been exhausted, but the big semi-rigid craft still will be able to remain in the air—drifting at the mercy of the dangerous northern winds—for at least a week.

It was assumed here that if the Italia is drifting northwest winds will drive the airship towards Siberia.

That assumption, however, is based on the belief that General Umberto Nobile still is fighting the elements. There is the possibility that the Italian explorer—one of the few men to cruise over the North Pole—has seen he can make no headway and has landed his ice covered craft some place in the Arctic solitudes.

Should the dirigible be brought to a landing on the northeast extremity of Spitzbergen, there is a chance that trappers might save its crew.

The Church Invites You

Strengthening a Good Resolution

The forming of a good resolution and the carrying into effect is basic in the development of moral character. We remove ourselves from the realm of the physical in making effective noble resolutions. The emphasis needs to be placed on the making.

EFFECTIVE good resolutions as the making of resolutions is rather easy.

A secret resolution seldom produces results because there is not enough of help outside; the individual. We are much more likely to act when our resolution has publicity. An open confession is good for the soul because of the helpful influences from other sources let loose.

The church is the divinely appointed institution for the open confession of good resolutions. The influence of friends and the mysterious ungrudging of divine strength move through the channel of the church. Of course you have resolved to be a good man. Why not accept the invitation and COME TO CHURCH NEXT SUNDAY?

Incurably Optimistic

One of the customary phrases of an old man over in Virginia was, "Well, it might have been worse," no matter how bad an event might have been.

An old crony determined to make up a story that would change that pet optimism. So one day he met the happy old man and said, "John, I dreamed I died last night, and went to hell."

"Goodness," came the reply, "that's bad—but it might have been worse."

"Yes," said the joker, "I dreamed that I found you down there, too."

"That was pretty bad, but it might have been worse," insisted the optimist.

The joker was dumfounded and said, "Look here dad, you do not mean it this time for there could be nothing worse than that; nothing and how can you persist in saying it might be worse?"

"Oh, that is easy," was the reply. "It might have been true."

expected then and now is the knowledge and worship of the one true God, righteousness and brotherhood, justice and mercy and preparation for and reception of the Messiah.

Vs. 3-5. "And again he sent unto them another servant; and him they wounded in the head and handled shamefully. And he sent another and him they killed; and many others; beating some and killing some. Wickedness becomes worse as it is practiced and bolder as it is allowed to go unpunished."

V. 6. "He had yet one son; he sent him last unto them, saying they will reverence my son." Who can doubt that these words report for us the mind of God, the planning and consultation that took place in heaven before the incarnation of Jesus Christ.

Vs. 7, 8. "But those husbandmen said among themselves, this is the heir; come, let us kill him, and the inheritance shall be ours. And they took him and killed him, and cast him forth out of the vineyard." The Saviour had for weeks been prophesying to his disciples that the hatred of his enemies would result in his death; now he does not hesitate to announce it publicly, though hidden in a parable.

V. 9. "What therefore will the lord of the vineyard do? He will come and destroy the husbandmen, and will give the vineyard unto others." Opportunities unimproved pass away, perhaps in to other hands. Knowledge that is not used fades away; the heart that will not aspire loses the power of aspiration. The soul that will not see God grows spiritually blind.

Vs. 10, 11. "Have ye not read even this scripture: the stone which the builders rejected, the same was made the head of the corner." Every great reform starts from some principle that is at first opposed; later it gains headway and becomes a power.

V. 12. "And they sought to lay him on him; and they feared the multitude; and they left him and went away." His kingdom is the only thing that can not be shaken. Whatever would have a solid foundation under it must get on this Rock.

Purity of life is determined by the intake and the outflow.

Discussion on Questions S. S. Lesson

Discussion Questions on the Sunday School Lessons, The Wicked Husbandmen, Mark 12:1-12 for Sunday, May 27.

1. How can a vineyard be made to bear fruit?

2. In what ways do judgments fall on unfaithful stewards?

3. How can we learn to discern true cornerstones?

4. What conditions are represented by the vineyard?

5. Why did the owner repeatedly send peaceful messengers?

6. What are the fruits God expects of us?

7. Why does God permit rebellious people to live on?

Clericus says: "From whatever point we view life we see that we are tenants and God is the great proprietor. Whatever part our forefathers and ourselves have had in the work, back of and in all these processes is God's presence and providence. However he may have worked thru human agencies, he planted this magnificent vineyard of America."

Lesson Prayer, "O Lord, we thank thee for privileges of service; help us to realize the real meaning of service and to render to thee the use of our best talent."

The Church Invites You

Strengthening a Good Resolution

The forming of a good resolution and the carrying into effect is basic in the development of moral character. We remove ourselves from the realm of the physical in making effective noble resolutions. The emphasis needs to be placed on the making, EFFECTIVE good resolutions as the making of resolutions is rather easy.

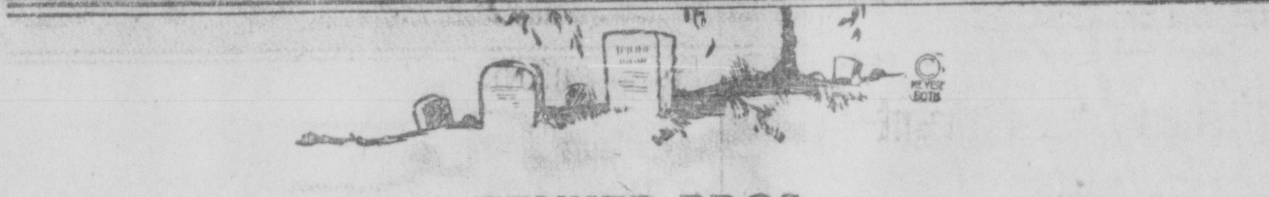

A secret resolution seldom produces results because there is not enough of help outside the individual. We are much more likely to act when our resolution has publicity. An open confession is good for the soul because of the helpful influences from other sources let loose.

The church is the divinely appointed institution for the open confession of good resolutions. The influence of friends and the mysterious ungrudging of divine strength move through the channel of the church. Of course you have resolved to be a good man. Why not accept the invitation and COME TO CHURCH NEXT SUNDAY?

"A LUCKY BREAK"

"A Lucky Break," the Circleville High School Senior play to be presented in the high school auditorium, May 31 and June 1, is guaranteed to be another, and the last, success of this school year.

The seniors have been working diligently for the past two weeks under the able instruction of Mr. Fetherlin, to make this production worth much more than the price asked for admission. As you undoubtedly know, this is the last presentation from the graduating class of '28 and for this reason they are striving to put before the public something that will make the people remember the seniors' last appearance before they leave their Alma Mater.

If you want to be a success in life, it is necessary that you see "A Lucky Break." Some of the experiences in the play are sure to strike you some day, and it will be only through "A Lucky Break" that you will know how to cope with, and secure your needs.

If you ever expect to return to your old home town, a millionaire, you must see "A Lucky Break," so you will know how to treat the old home "towners." (Bob Pickens will show you how.) If the "leap year girls" are undecided about how to begin, come and see Grace Bower propose to her lover. If you don't think "Charlie Goeller" can make love you have another guess coming. Can you imagine Odessa Elisea "falling" for Charlie? I wonder if you would like to be buried in Paul Kirwin's cemetery, "The Idle Hour." (He expects to sell it for one hundred thousand dollars.) Come and let Herman Compton sell you a lot in Paul's cemetery. If you and Dudley Carpenter will give will let them, Eleanor Snyder, a few French dancing lessons.

Betty May is the willing maid, who decorates the dinner table with poison ivy. Margaret Rooney is the easy-going hotel proprietress. Frank Marion, as Bob Pickens' business manager, shows himself to be a genuine "big business" man. Leona Bowman takes the part of Odessa's mother. She is constantly trying to "marry Odessa off" to a wealthy gentleman. Odessa, however, has her own views concerning marriage.

Frances Metzger can never find anything to please her. She is always "storming" at some one. Garnet Van Buskirk, Ruth Landenburger, and Helen Liston are guests that want to learn to dance like the nymphs. (Possibly because the dancing teacher is so good looking.)

Leo White has a double "role." He plays the part of Pickens' valet, and also the busman, Carl Palm is the chauffeur in livery.

These are only a few words concerning one phase in the life of the actors during the play. Most of them have many "moods." Betty May changes from an old-fashioned maid to a 1929 "ramp." "Charlie" Goeller pretends he is in love with another girl so his real sweetheart's mother will not suspect him of falling in love with her daughter. Bob Pickens, the millionaire, pretends he is "broke" and becomes the new hotel proprietor. When Herman Compton has sold all his cemetery lots he buys a new suit. The suit is a treat. Paul Kirwin, who "thinks he's the only pebble on the beach," finally comes to the conclusion that there are other pebbles just as big, and just as important as he.

The play has a touch of humor throughout. No matter what your "life work" happens to be you will enjoy seeing "A Lucky Break," and besides it is sure to help you over your troubles.

FRESHMEN PICNIC

The Freshmen picnic was held at Scioto park, about five miles south of Circleville. After lunch was served at 5 o'clock, the class enjoyed a very splendid afternoon playing baseball of which Mr. Fred Watts and Miss Kuhlmann served as officials.

TRACK BASEBALL

SQUAD LEADS

The track baseball squad leads the other teams with no defeats. The track nine is a picked team from all candidates out for track. They are heading the list because all of their men report for the games. They had more material to pick a good team from than the class teams. Harold Dumm, our track captain, always has the power to drive the ball over the fielder's head.

PUBLIC SPEAKING CLASS

The public speaking class which is in charge of Mr. Fetherlin, has completed a large amount of work this year.

There are twenty-three in this class which is about twice the former size of this department. Each person in order to get credit was required to make at least two public appearances. Everyone in the class has succeeded in doing this.

The debate teams were very good this year. They established a record for Circleville high school by winning three out of the four interscholastic debates. The class was fortunate in securing a play, which had run for five years on Broadway. An added feature to this was the fact that a double cast was used.

The members of this class successfully co-operated in producing the dramatic of the recent opera. A play with 18 characters is now being prepared by members of the Senior class. There are twelve new people who have had but little public speaking training. This brings the number to forty and who have had actual public speaking training in Circleville high school this year.

In this work four textbooks of argumentation and debate were studied. These books were compiled by leading authorities on such matters. Three late textbooks on public speaking and dramatics were also studied.

The course included voice drill and lectures from combined courses in Miami and Ohio Northern Universities.

On the whole the class has enjoyed this year's work and is pleased with the success they have met in the different fields of public speaking and dramatics. They all agree that the bulk of honors received should go to Mr. Fetherlin who has expended much time and effort to bring laurels to Circleville high school.

SCIENCE DEPARTMENT

Mr. Fred Watts, teacher of science in the Circleville high school, has been giving his Freshmen classes tests on a scientific magazine, "Current Science," published once a week by Harar A. Webb of George Peabody College, Nashville, Tenn. These tests were prepared by Mr. Webb and sent to science teachers. The tests concerned different issues of Current Science. One part was to write one hundred word essays on "Ways that I Use What I Have Learned in Science."

Facts about many things that I have long wondered about have been revealed to me in Science. Many of these things are of benefit to me in everyday life. Aside from this I take great pleasure in "carrying home the news," as I call it.

I love to tell the family about the new marvels of inventions and what some scientists think about things to come. Science makes the old feel young when they say "Back in the good old days."

J. ROBERT ROONEY.

"Ways That I Use What I Have Learned in Science"

I have used what I have learned every day and some times at night. My father and I were fishing one night last week. We didn't know which way north was. It had only been the day before when we had astronomy. I found the Big Dipper and looked where the point stars pointed. When I found the North Star I knew which way north was. Another time I used my science was in helping a man lift a large rock to the top of a wall. We had studied pulleys and I showed him how to hook them up. In this easy manner I earned 50c for about 15 minutes work.

JOHN HIMROD.

"Ways That I Use What I Have Learned in Science"

One day my sister had the gas fire turned up as high as possible. The candy was already boiling but she insisted that the candy would be done sooner if the fire was left up.

I told her that the liquid would not get any hotter, but would boil harder. She said she had been taught the same thing but she didn't believe there was anything truthful about it.

I used to waste much gas and a great deal of my patience when I turned the fire up I would expect the candy to cook in a very short time. Since I have studied Science I know this is only a foolish idea.

GRACE STEELE.

CHAPEL

Monday morning, May 21, chapel was held in the high school auditorium. Coach Swearingin discussed the track meet held at Centralia Friday, May 18, which Circleville won. Following this discussion the study of the constitution was continued. In this study, the qualifications, salary, and oath of the president were discussed. Also the powers which he holds to fill vacancies, make treaties and appointments; to remove officers; to make recommendations, and convene congress.

EXCHANGE

Members of the Girls Glee club and orchestra, who have rendered to the music department exceptional service, are to receive pins.

Awards made at this time are given to those who have taken an active part in the school's activities from a musical standpoint. They must have at least five semesters of active work in music. A good record must have been maintained throughout this period.—South High Optic, Columbus.

The Public Speaking Department of the University plans to try something new next year. It is going to publish a complete bulletin of all its available speakers, speeches, debates, and plays. The Department will send this list to a large number of organizations, such as churches, schools, clubs and lodges, in the surrounding towns, guaranteeing to furnish speakers or plays for almost any occasion.—The Miami Student, Oxford.

Men's Glee Club presented a very enjoyable sacred concert. This group will represent North Central College while they are on their eastern tour this summer.—The College Chronicle-Naperville.

The Seniors have chosen "The Enemy" for their commencement play. The theme deals with the World War—Lancaster, Lancaster.

NIGHT SCHOOL

Thursday, May 24, the high school and seventh and eighth grades held their regular afternoon sessions in the evening. This special session began at 7:30 p. m. and consisted of three 20-minute periods. The purpose of this was to give the parents and friends an opportunity to observe the pupils at the various studies, and to let the parents converse with the teacher concerning their children's work.

The pupils had not been drilled for this session. Their recitations consisted of their advanced lessons, and for this reason the parents were privileged with seeing the average mark made by their children.

This is the first night session we have had for several years. It was well attended. The faculty believes much good is derived from such an enterprise.

CONTENTMENT

By Marie Kellstadt

Of all the ways to spend a rainy day, I think the very best is to sit by the fire and read. There is always such a comfortable feeling derived from the pleasant occupation of reading before a cheerful fire on a dark, gloomy, day. One seems to sense a stillness in the room brought on by the rain, unusual at any other time.

It has been my experience that the truth of a book or story is easily understood when we are alone in a room deeply engrossed in our novel on such a day.

There is always less interruption on a day of this sort than on a sunshiny day. It is probably due to this that we can enter into the reading of our story with pleasant expectations and a feeling of coziness—a feeling akin to lazy comfortableness.

WHERE I LIKE TO STUDY

There are many places I might go to study, but my favorite place is the attic. The attic is not only very big and very roomy, but is also not required for the use of the family at all. In consequence I took possession of it. I adopted it for my own use when I was quite a little girl, not more than seven or eight years of age.

It is in the attic that I live my real life. This is my dream world and there I am happy. In this attic I keep my books that I like to study best.

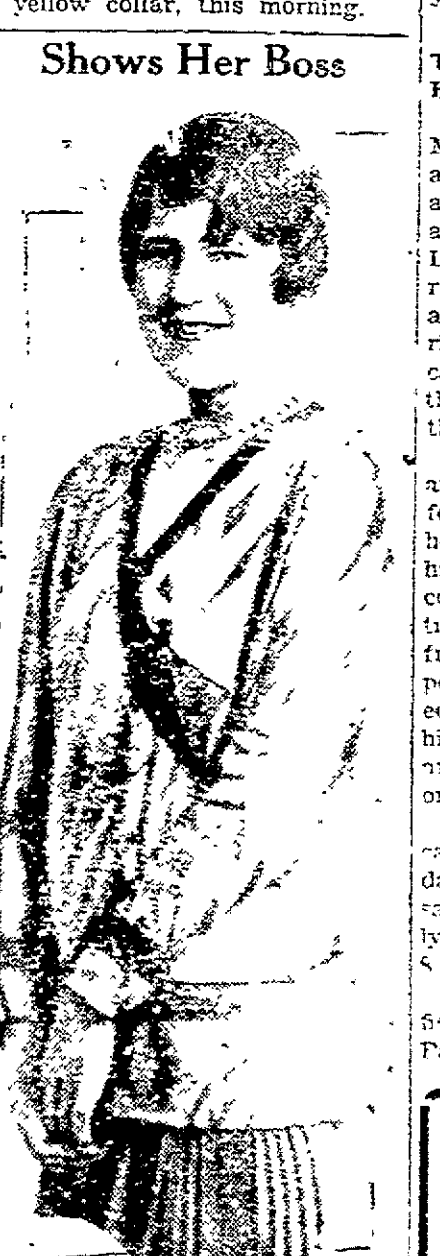

In the attic I am with the author and his thoughts. My vision has a clearer field. The world knows nothing about me when I am in the attic. But, never mind, my real home is in the attic. The other people of the house have very little idea how much of my time is spent in this attic.

A DESCRIPTION

By Catherine Groom

A sapling beside her is not straighter nor rounder than her slender form. Her soft straight hair clings about her face. It is parted on the left side and when it is first washed it is like the gold of the sun which filters through the windows. Her eyes are just the deepest blue of the iris, her lips the reddest of the foxfire, and her cheeks exactly like the satin of a wild rose-petal. She is quiet until one becomes well acquainted with her. She has on a blue dress, with white and pink dots in it and a yellow collar, this morning.

SCHOOL CELEBRATION

Miss Ann Bennett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bennett of S. Court-st., is a student at the Birmingham School, located at Birmingham, Penna. She will take an active part in the 75th anniversary of the school which will be celebrated at its June commencement.

Birmingham was founded in 1853 by Dr. Lemuel G. Grier of Lafayette College, his wife Sarah Boileau Grier and Miss Nancy Jane Davis, a graduate of M. L. Holyoke College, in the Class of 1856. Since 1887 Alvan Ruckman Grier has been president of the school. During all these years the Birmingham School has been preparing girls for the leading women's colleges of the country.

The school is situated in the midst of a park land of one hundred acres in the central part of Pennsylvania. During the last twelve years has come the greatest material growth at Birmingham. Over $400,000 has been spent in improvements and expansion; the enrollment has been doubled; and the faculty greatly increased. The examinations of the College Entrance Board are held at the school each June. Student government has been placed in successful operation. Military drill and intensive intramural competition in athletics as between the Green and Gold, have been introduced. Birmingham was one of the first accredited list published by the Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools of the Middle States and Maryland. The present Head Master, Preston S. Moulton, a graduate of Brown University in the class of 1906, together with his wife, has been associated with Mr. Grier in the management of Birmingham during these twelve years of intensive development.

T. BOWSER ENTERTAINS

FRIENDS TO WIENER ROAST

Friends of Theda Bowser of E. Main-st. were her guests Thursday afternoon and evening at a hike and wiener roast. Thirty-two boys and girls accompanied by Mrs. Louise D. Crawford, started on a real hike which took them as far as the mouth of Darby along the river road. Here they built a camp-fire large enough for all of them to gather around, to roast the wieners.

There was only one casualty, and that was when John Robinson fell in the creek, and had to go home for dry clothes. This and his return to the picnic was accomplished in record breaking time. The only effects he felt from the splash, were on his appetite. One other boy just missed an early Spring swim, when his companions grabbed his feet and he walked out of the water on his hands.

The light and warmth of the campfire, kept the picnickers until dark, telling stories and eating sandwiches around it. They finally started home, and arrived about 5:30 o'clock.

Those who enjoyed one of the first real outings of the year were Paul Davis, Otis Mader, Charles

ROYAL NEIGHBORS

HAVE BIG MEETING

The meeting of the Royal Neighbors of America, Thursday night, was one of the most successful of the year. There were more than 100 members and guests present to enjoy the splendid evening's program and to witness the initiation of 21 candidates.

There were 20 visitors from Chillicothe, and several of these conferred "The side degree" upon two of the men. This degree proved to be the hit of the evening, and every one was convulsed with laughter at the antics of the two initiates. Little other entertainment was necessary after this part of the program.

Dr. W. H. Ramsey, district deputy for southern district of Modern Woodmen, No. 12, gave a splendid extemporaneous talk on "The Principles of the Royal Neighbors of America." He himself was one of the night's initiates, and spoke of his impressions of the lessons as taught by the initiation program. Dr. Ramsey was at one time a minister for many years, and a short time ago changed his life work to that of a lawyer. Now he has become interested in the organization work of the Modern Woodmen, and is one of their staunchest supporters.

Following the initiation and the speech of Dr. Ramsey, a buffet supper was served by about 40 members of the losing side of two teams in a membership drive. Mrs. Adolphus Pierce was the captain of the losing side and the supper was served under her supervision.

BIBLE THOUGHT

WE'VE MADE A MACHINE

AND MUST CONTROL IT
President Lewis E. Pierson of the United States Chamber of Commerce tells members of his organization that the United States is facing a new and important task.

"It must prove," he says, "that production is its servant and not its master. It must demonstrate that it has the will and skill to control the machine it has created."

During the last century and a half the whole organization of human society has undergone a complete change. The introduction of steam engines, followed by electricity and gasoline motors, effected a revolution more sweeping than any change that had come in a thousand years preceding. Now, as President Pierson says, the time has come when we must examine the new order very closely and see whether we can make it yield the most possible good for all members of society.

In the old days the chief problem of the common man was to escape from political oppression and get a voice in his own government. After long centuries of struggle, with the American and French revolutions as a climax, he succeeded. And then the industrial revolution gave him a new problem.

From that time on his chief need was economic freedom. All-powerful in political affairs, he began to discover that did not necessarily mean much, after all. He could elect his national officials and make his own laws, but he was at the mercy of the men with money—the men who owned the mills, the railroads, the mines and the banks. He had won a fight only to find a new situation that made his victory hollow. Having gained political freedom, he now had to win economic liberty.

That is the issue that faces the world today; and that is one of the issues implied in President Pierson's warning. We have developed a marvelous system for making and transporting things; we must see to it that it remains our servant and does not devour us.

That does not mean that we must all turn socialists, or that we must hedge business around with a million government regulations. It does mean, though, that it is supremely important to the nation that industry enlist in its service the very best minds the country has. The director's room is growing more significant than the legislative chamber. The future lies largely in the hands of the business man. He has a tremendous responsibility. President Pierson's speech is an encouraging indication that business is beginning to recognize it.

THE GRATEFUL PRISONER

Yes, jail prisoners are mostly a tough and treacherous lot, especially those in for criminal violence. But consider this case.

Albert Bethune, held in the county jail at Zebulon, Ga., on a charge of murder, committed suicide the other day for a remarkable reason. A pistol was smuggled to him so that he could kill the jailer and make his escape. He planned his strike for freedom, then changed his mind. He explained it in a note left for the sheriff. He couldn't kill the jailer, he said, because the jailer had been kind to him; so he killed himself instead.

Jean Valjean, most famous of French fiction prisoners, might have done that.

Kisses your face

Lulls you to sleep

Is done;
Helps all the gay

Shake their bright

Lifts the earth
That through

Was dead—

And what we mean to say
Is,
Thus do we revel when
Spring comes around,
Lifting gay life
From the dead of the

Thus does the wind

Does,

And I don't mind
For I haven't a care

SYNOPSIS

Buckwell, a Frisco politician, seeks to secure valuable ancestral Vasquez property. His lawyer's nephew, Terry, loves Dolores Vasquez and exposes Buckwell's perjury. Buckwell attempts to wreck their love affair. Vasquez dies of stroke when Buckwell threatens to dispossess him. Dolores and Terry expose Buckwell as Chinaman in effort to avenge Vasquez's death. Buckwell kidnaps them. Terry threatened with torture unless Dolores clears Buckwell's name. She lies to his contemporaries and saves Terry's life. Buckwell triumphant. Dolores cleverly foils Buckwell and exposes him to other bosses.

Brandon stooped quickly and seizing the edge of the rug upon which San Toy stood, he gave a quick jerk, and the faithful San Toy was spilled ignominiously on her back. Her tragic stand had been useless. She was deprived of the keen blade before she even knew what had happened to her, but her captors made the mistake of deeming her harmless now that her sting had been removed.

In her own way San Toy was even more dangerous than Buckwell and her brain worked faster. With a swift movement she pushed the heavy cabinet doors together. But before they had closed on Terry with suffocating death, Dolores screamed in alarm and rushing forward pulled them wide apart.

"Terry, dear! Terry!" she sobbed. "You are safe!"

Brandon added his strong hands to Dolores' efforts to unfasten the

"I know nothing could stop you." cruel, tight straps. And in a few moments they lifted Terry from his painful position and placed him gently on the floor.

"Oh! my dear, they have hurt you so," soothed Dolores on her knees beside him trying to wipe away the dried blood with her own dainty handkerchief.

"Are you alright?" Terry asked anxiously. They were the first words he had been able to utter for many hours.

"Yes, dear!" she replied and bending over she kissed him gently and unashamed.

"Then everything is alright." He smiled his former winning smile and ignored his own aching body. Dolores helped him rise. He stretched, painfully, as the blood began flowing through his numbed limbs.

In the meantime the tong men had been looking around the room. Buckwell and San Toy exchanged significant glances. They had their minds centered on escape and were biding an opportune time to leave the room. Ignorant of the scheming minds, working so cleverly while they were inspecting the room, Buckwell's political contemporaries discovered his Chinese shine and threw back the handsome draperies. The fat Buddha, so rudely exposed to view, appeared garish and critical. Buckwell shuddered.

The dwarf peered from his cage, silent and weak from excitement. The room had never before been so filled with people. Suddenly realizing what it was all about the dwarf drew everyone's attention his way by uttering a hideous laugh.

"Behold!" he shouted, extending a scrawny hand at Buckwell. "Behold my illustrious brother as he stands paralyzed with fear." Buckwell's face was hideous with fury. It was unquestionably Chinese. He no longer had any hope of concealing his nationality. The hated dwarf brother had completely unmasked him.

Lu Fong's eyes were alight with triumph and satisfaction.

"That settles it, Buckwell," said one of the white bosses who were holding him, "there is no doubt about your origin now."

Brought to bay, Buckwell whirled and struggled.

Sandino and his army of bandits are marching east toward the Atlantic Ocean, says a news dispatch. Some one should give them the order to "fall in."—Arizona Record.

Suddenly every light in the room was extinguished and the surprised and frightened people groped about in black, black darkness.

San Toy had jammed a knife in the light switch.

Taken unaware the men released their hold on Buckwell for only a brief moment, but he seized the opportunity to elude them.

Pandemonium reigned in the underground room. There was wild darting back and forth, shouting, and the men who had held Buckwell groped blindly in an effort to hold him again.

It was the dwarf's guiding voice who directed the way to another light. It illuminated the room sufficiently to disclose the fact that Buckwell, Dolores and San Toy had made a complete and mysterious disappearance.

Terry was in a mad frenzy of despair. They literally tore the room apart, yet no trace of the missing ones could be found.

"Let me out! Let me out!" shouted the dwarf. "I know where they have gone—I'll show the illustrious ones!"

Without delay the bolt on his cage was slid open, the door dropped down and Buckwell's unfortunate brother jumped to the floor in a wild ecstasy of delight.

Darting from one costly object to another he hurried priceless vases and rare books to the door, intent upon destroying the things his selfish brother had prized. His scrawny arms with their uncanny strength pulled costly hangings from the walls and with each new bit of destruction he raised his hideous Chinese face and laughed raucously.

The men watched the wild orgy in amazement.

But every moment took Dolores farther and farther away, and unable to stand the strain a moment longer, Terry grasped the Dwarf by the back of his soiled collar.

"Where did they go?" he demanded; "hurry up—tell us."

"I know! I know!" came in gleeful chuckles. "Come, I'll show you." And with long arms swinging almost to the floor he ambled to the secret passage that the tong men and white bosses had used a short while before.

Examining the door carefully the Dwarf shook his head. "My illustrious brother was wise. He did not go up stairs—but I will make the door stay open so the honorable gentlemen who have helped me gain my freedom can find their way out. As long as this door remains open the opa above will stay unlocked. You are free to depart when the mood seizes you."

There were several audible sighs of relief and a half dozen men took advantage of the opportunity to return to the upper world.

"But where did they go—you have not shown us," insisted Terry impatiently.

"I will, I will." And waddling to another part of the room he rubbed his big hands around the wall, in circular motion, and down to the floor. Suddenly he leaped up in the air and shouted. In his right hand was a torn bit of ruffe from Dolores' black gown. It had caught in the secret opening as she was hastily pushed out.

The men who had remained gathered around the Dwarf as he minipulated a secret bit of scroll work, in the same fashion he had so often seen his brother employ. A black mouth, leading to the hungry jaws of the underworld opened before them.

"I am going to follow," announced Terry. "I know nothing could stop you," said Brandon, grasping his nephew's hand for a brief moment. "But be careful, boy, it's risky. Come to my office as soon as you can—I want to see you."

Terry looked his thanks and with a wave to the other men faced the passageway that led, he knew not where.

"If I can be of service to the illustrious one," called Lu Fong, "it shall be my pleasure to serve him."

Terry turned only long enough to thank Lu Fong, then he ducked into the tunnel and started the long, unknown quest for Dolores.

"Wait!" shouted the Dwarf. "I come, too. You look for the lady and I search for my peridious brother to taunt him with my freedom."

Terry did not wait, but the Dwarf reached his side before they were down the first flight of swinging stairs that started them on their way to the hidden and forbidden depths of the underworld where Buckwell had fled with Dolores.

CHAPTER XIX

The Shrine of the Golden Door. Beneath the crooked, tree-lined streets of San Francisco's Chinatown lived another world. A world that was hidden and forbidden, with all the mystery of old China.

An underworld—a shadowland—where vice and desire went hand in hand. It was a melting pot of outcasts, with scarcely a face that was wholly sane and healthy.

Lindbergh, in our opinion, has been amply repaid for his big effort. He has had glory and wealth heaped on him by the car load. Now, if the country is serious in its intentions to promulgate flying—and it ought to be—it should turn its efforts seriously to the bettering of the machinery and inventive ideas that will establish it on a firm basis. Let's quit our hero-worshipping for a while and get down to serious business.

BRICK SURFACE

Prevents Pavement Failure—

That saves taxpayers' money

Why do pavements fail?

First, because of damage by weather.

Second, because of traffic.

Unless the very nature of a pavement surface prevents it, water is absorbed—or taken in through tiny cracks. This, freezing, causes certain damage. Trucks and cars hit the defects—enlarge and multiply them rapidly.

Paving brick bound with asphalt and laid on a good base, is a surface impervious to water. Being vitrified, it is a surface that water does not penetrate. It also has sufficient resilience—"give"—to protect the base from heavy traffic pounding.

Tire chains do not shatter it; heat does not soften it and the weather does not affect it. Total upkeep costs on 30-year-old pavements are still almost nothing—and the bricks are good for another 30 years. Such records prove brick to be the cheapest of all pavement surfaces.

"The A. B. C. of Good Paving," a taxpayer's manual, tells in words and pictures how engineers today build ever-lasting, low cost, brick surfaced roads and streets. Address your request to National Paving Brick Manufacturers Association, 332 South Michigan Avenue, Chicago.

THEATERS

HALL BACK AT MET
James Hall, one of the most popular of the Paramount leading men, has the important male lead in Bebe Daniels' latest starring picture for Paramount, "The Fifty-Fifty Girl." This new Daniels' comedy will be the feature attraction at the Metropolitan theatre, starting Monday for two days.

"The Fifty-Fifty Girl" is the story of a modern girl and came from the pen of John McDermott who has written the stories for many of Miss Daniels' recent successes, including "Senorita" and "She's a Shiek." The part assigned Hall in this picture is an important one.

Hall returned to the Daniels lot for this picture after an absence of more than four months. He was formerly a successful stage player in New York and he made his screen debut opposite Miss Daniels in "The Campus Girl." When he completed that picture he was cast for the leading male role in two other Daniels pictures, "Senorita" and "Swim, Girl, Swim."

THE BETTER WAY

The Monroe Doctrine.

According to Bishop William F. Oldham, in the World Outlook, the Monroe Doctrine is as odious to the republics of South America as it is to Germany.

"Happy in our self confidence, we rather enjoyed the pose of playing big sister to the little brother republics. It made a good picture—Brazil, the Argentine and the rest as shy youngsters peeping out warily from the folds of a matronly Liberty's flowing gowns."

"But our neighbors did not appreciate the theme of this picture and they are glad that at least the Monroe Doctrine is melting away and a Pan-American doctrine is taking shape. They welcome the growing bonds that will come the Americas, join them as equals. Less of the spirit of protection of the weak by the strong, more of the spirit of brotherhood is desired."

"A LUCKY BREAK"

"A Lucky Break," the Circleville High School Senior play to be presented in the high school auditorium, May 31 and June 1, is guaranteed to be another, and the last, success of this school year.

The seniors have been working diligently for the past two weeks under the able instruction of Mr. Fetherlin, to make this production worth much more than the price asked for admission. As you undoubtedly know, this is the last presentation from the graduating class of '28 and for this reason they are striving to put before the public something that will make the people remember the seniors' last appearance before they leave their Alma Mater.

If you want to be a success in life, it is necessary that you see "A Lucky Break." Some of the experiences in the play are sure to strike you some day, and it will be only through "A Lucky Break" that you will know how to cope with, and secure your needs.

If you ever expect to return to your old home town, a millionaire, you must see "A Lucky Break," so you will know how to treat the old home "towners." (Bob Pickens will show you how.) If the "leap year girls" are undecided about how to begin, come and see Grace Bower propose to her lover. If you don't think "Charlie Goeller" can make love you have another guess coming. Can you imagine Odessa Elsea "falling" for Charlie? I wonder if you would like to be buried in Paul Kirwin's cemetery, "The Idle Hour." (He expects to sell for one hundred thousand dollars.) Come and let Herman Compton sell you a lot in Paul's cemetery. If you and Dudley Carpenter will give you a few French dancing lessons. Betty May is the willing maid, who decorates the dinner table with poison ivy. Margaret Rooney is the easy-going hotel proprietress. Frank Marion, as Bob Pickens' business manager, shows himself to be a genuine "big business" man. Leona Bowman takes the part of Odessa's mother. She is constantly trying to "marry Odessa off" to a wealthy gentleman. Odessa, however, has her own views concerning marriage.

Frances Metzger can never find anything to please her. She is always "storming" at some one. Garnet Van Buskirk, Ruth Landenburger, and Helen Liston are guests that want to learn to dance like the nymphs. (Possibly because the dancing teacher is so good looking.)

Leo White has a double "role." He plays the part of Pickens' valet, and also the busman. Carl Palm is the chauffeur in livery.

These are only a few words concerning one phase in the life of the actors during the play. Most of them have many "moods." Betty May changes from an old-fashioned maid to a 1929 "vamp." "Charlie" Goeller pretends he is in love with another girl so his real sweetheart's mother will not suspect him of falling in love with her daughter. Bob Pickens, the millionaire, pretends he is "broke" and becomes the new hotel proprietor. When Herman Compton has sold all his cemetery lots he buys a new suit. The suit is a treat. Paul Kirwin, who thinks he's the "only pebble on the beach," finally comes to the conclusion that there are other pebbles just as big, and just as important as he.

The play has a touch of humor throughout. No matter what your "life work" happens to be you will enjoy seeing "A Lucky Break," and besides it is sure to help you over your troubles.

FRESHMEN PICNIC

The Freshmen picnic was held at Scippo park, about five miles south of Circleville. After lunch was served at 5 o'clock, the class enjoyed a very splendid afternoon playing baseball, of which Mr. Fred Watts and Miss Kuhlmann served as officials.

TRACK BASEBALL SQUAD LEADS

The track baseball squad leads the other teams with no defeats. The track nine is a picked team from all candidates out for track. They are heading the list because all of their men report for the games. They had more material to pick a good team from than the class teams. Harold Dumm, our track captain, always has the power to drive the ball over the fielder's head.

PUBLIC SPEAKING CLASS

The public speaking class which is in charge of Mr. Fetherlin, has completed a large amount of work this year.

There are twenty-three in this class which is about twice the former size of this department. Each person in order to get credit was required to make at least two public appearances. Everyone in the class has succeeded in doing this.

The debate teams were very good this year. They established a record for Circleville high school by winning three out of the four interscholastic debates.

The class was fortunate in securing a play, which had run for five years on Broadway. An added feature to this was the fact that a double cast was used.

The members of this class successfully co-operated in producing the dramatic of the recent operetta. A play with 18 characters is now being prepared by members of the Senior class. There are twelve new people who have had but little public speaking training. This brings the number to forty and who have had actual public speaking training in Circleville high school this year.

In this work four textbooks of argumentation and debate were studied. These books were compiled by leading authorities on such matters. Three late textbooks on public speaking and dramatics were also studied.

The course included voice drill and lectures from combined courses in Miami and Ohio Northern Universities.

On the whole the class has enjoyed this year's work and is pleased with the success they have met in the different fields of public speaking and dramatics. They all agree that the bulks of honors received should go to Mr. Fetherlin who has expended much time and effort to bring laurels to Circleville high school.

SCIENCE DEPARTMENT

Mr. Fred Watts, teacher of science in the Circleville high school, has been giving his Freshmen classes tests on a scientific magazine, "Current Science," published once a week by Harar A. Webb of George Peabody College, Nashville, Tenn. These tests were prepared by Mr. Webb and sent to science teachers. The tests concerned different issues of Current Science. One part was to write one hundred word essays on "Ways that I Use What I Have Learned in Science." Following were some received from different Freshmen.

"Ways That I Use What I Have Learned in Science"

Facts about many things that I have long wondered about have been revealed to me in Science. Many of these things are of benefit to me in everyday life. Aside from this I take great pleasure in "carrying home the news," as I call it.

I love to tell the family about the new marvels of inventions and what some scientists think about things to come. Science makes the old feel young when they say "Back in the good old days."

J. ROBERT ROONEY.

"Ways That I Use What I Have Learned in Science"

I have used what I have learned every day and some times at night. My father and I were fishing one night last week. We didn't know which way north was. It had only been the day before when we had astronomy. I found the Big Dipper and looked where the point stars pointed. When I found the North Star I knew which way north was. Another time I used my science was in helping a man lift a large rock to the top of a wall. We had studied pulleys and I showed him how to hook them up. In this easy manner I earned 50c for about 15 minutes work.

—JOHN HIMROD.

"Ways That I Use What I Have Learned in Science"

One day my sister had the gas fire turned up as high as possible. The candy was already boiling, but she insisted that the candy would be done sooner if the fire was left up.

I told her that the liquid would not get any hotter, but would boil harder. She said she had been taught the same thing but she didn't believe there was anything truthful about it.

I used to waste much gas and a great deal of my patience. When I turned the fire up I would expect the candy to cook in a very short time. Since I have studied Science I know this is only a foolish idea.

NIGHT SCHOOL

Thursday, May 24, the high school and seventh and eighth grades held their regular afternoon sessions in the evening. This special session began at 7:30 p. m. and consisted of three 30-minute periods. The purpose of this was to give the parents and friends an opportunity to observe the pupils at the various studies, and to let the parents converse with the teachers concerning their children's work.

The pupils had not been drilled for this session. Their recitations consisted of their advanced lessons, and for this reason the parents were privileged with seeing the average mark made by their children.

This is the first night session we have had for several years. It was well attended. The faculty believes much good is derived from such an enterprise.

CONTENTMENT

By Marie Kellstadt

Of all the ways to spend a rainy day, I think the very best is to sit by the fire and read. There is always such a comfortable feeling derived from the pleasant occupation of reading before a cheerful fire on a dark, gloomy day. One seems to sense a stillness in the room brought on by the rain, unusual at any other time.

It has been my experience that the truth of a book or story is easily understood when we are alone in a room deeply engrossed in our novel on such a day.

There is always less interruption on a day of this sort than on a sunshiny day. It is probably due to this that we can enter into the reading of our story with pleasant expectations and a feeling of coziness—a feeling akin to lazy comfortableness.

WHERE I LIKE TO STUDY

There are many places I might go to study, but my favorite place is the attic. The attic is not only very big and very roomy, but is also not required for the use of the family at all. In consequence I took possession of it. I adopted it for my own use when I was quite a little girl, not more than seven or eight years of age.

It is in the attic that I live my real life. This is my dream world and there I am happy. In this attic I keep my books that I like to study best.

In the attic I am with the author and his thoughts. My vision has a clearer field.

The world knows nothing about me when I am in the attic. But never mind, my real home is in the attic. The other people of the house have very little idea how much of my time is spent in this attic.

A DESCRIPTION

By Catherine Groom

A sapling beside her is not straighter nor rounder than her slender form. Her soft straight hair clings about her face. It is parted on the left side, and when it is first washed it is like the gold of the sun which filters through the windows. Her eyes are just the deepest blue of the iris, her lips the reddest of the foxfire, and her cheeks exactly like the satin of a wild rose-petal. She is always smiling, but is rather quiet until one becomes well acquainted with her. She has on a blue dress, with white and pink dots in it and a yellow collar, this morning.

Shows Her Boss

Miss Frances Bailey of Kansas City, Mo., quit her job when her employer rejected her ideas about the manufacture of women's clothes. Now she is head of her own corporation.

ANN BENNETT IN SCHOOL CELEBRATION

School Ann Bennett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bennett of S. Court-st, is a student at the Birmingham School, located at Birmingham, Penna. She will take an active part in the 75th anniversary of the school which will be celebrated at its June commencement.

Birmingham was founded in 1853 by Dr. Lemuel G. Grier of Lafayette College, his wife Sarah Boileau Grier and Miss Nancy Jane Davis, a graduate of Mt. Holyoke College, in the Class of 1856. Since 1857 Alvan Ruckman Grier has been president of the school. During all these years the Birmingham School has been preparing girls for the leading women's colleges of the country.

The school is situated in the midst of a park land of one hundred acres in the central part of Pennsylvania. During the last twelve years has come the greatest material growth at Birmingham. Over $400,000 has been spent in improvements and expansion; the enrollment has been doubled, and the faculty greatly increased. The examinations of the College Entrance Board are held at the school each June. Student government has been placed in successful operation. Military drill and intensive intramural competition in athletics as between the Green and Gold, have been introduced. Birmingham was one the first accredited list published by the Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools of the Middle States and Maryland. The present Head Master, Preston S. Moulton, a graduate of Brown University in the class of 1906, together with his wife, has been associated with Mr. Grier in the management of Birmingham during these twelve years of intensive development.

T. BOWSHER ENTERTAINS FRIENDS TO WIENER ROAST

Friends of Theda Bowsher of E. Main-st were her guests Thursday afternoon and evening at a hike and wiener roast. Thirty-two boys and girls accompanied by Mrs. Louise D. Crawford, started on a real hike which took them as far as the mouth of Darby along the river road. Here they built a camp-fire large enough for all of them to gather around, to roast the wieners.

There was only one casualty, and that was when John Robinson fell in the creek, and had to go home for dry clothes. This and his return to the picnic was accomplished in record breaking time. The only effects he felt from the splash, were on his appetite. One other boy just missed an early Spring swim, when his companions grabbed his feet and he walked out of the water on his hands.

The light and warmth of the campfire, kept the picnickers until dark, telling stories and eating sandwiches around it. They finally started home, and arrived about 8:30 o'clock.

Those who enjoyed one of the first real outings of the year were Paul Davis, Otis Mader, Charles

ROYAL NEIGHBORS HAVE BIG MEETING

The meeting of the Royal Neighbors of America, Thursday night, was one of the most successful of the year. There were more than 100 members and guests present to enjoy the splendid evening's program and to witness the initiation of 21 candidates.

There were 20 visitors from Chillicothe, and several of these conferred "The side degree" upon two of the men. This degree proved to be the hit of the evening, and every one was convulsed with laughter at the antics of the two initiates. Little other entertainment was necessary after this part of the program.

Dr. W. H. Ramsey, district deputy for southern district of Modern Woodmen, No. 12, gave a splendid extemporaneous talk on "The Principles of the Royal Neighbors of America." He himself was one of the night's initiates, and spoke of his impressions of the lessons as taught by the initiation program. Dr. Ramsey was at one time a minister for many years, and a short time ago changed his life work to that of a lawyer. Now he has become interested in the organization work of the Modern Woodmen, and is one of their staunchest supporters.

Following the initiation and the speech of Dr. Ramsey, a buffet supper was served by about 40 members of the losing side of two teams in a membership drive. Mrs. Adolphus Pierce was the captain of the losing side and the supper was served under her supervision.
